

Plastic Surgery - Script

This billion dollar industry seems to be breaking new popularity records every year. While some people denounce the abuses committed in the name of beauty, others have much more liberal views. In other words, it has been at the heart of an ongoing debate for decades.

But is plastic surgery only a tool used to boost one's ego ?

The normalisation of plastic surgery is having a major impact on younger generations. Young girls, and contrary to belief boys as well, are faced with images of people having undergone plastic surgery on a daily basis. These representations often do not match the reality of what the billions of humans look like, causing a rise in teenage mental disorders. As mentioned previously, plastic surgery is a billion dollar industry. The consequence is that of unlicensed doctors tricking patients into unnecessary or dangerous surgeries for personal gain, with devastating consequences. Lastly, one can become addicted to plastic surgery, abusing it to the point of endangering their financial stability and health.

Nonetheless, surgery is constantly evolving and there are newer and safer procedures implemented every year. Plastic surgery is a booming specialty of surgery. Therefore it has become and keeps on becoming better and safer. There are also those who live with great complexes and cannot find release in more traditional alternatives. The mental benefits can be tremendous for them, often greater than the physical results. In extreme cases, plastic surgery is actually vital to give some people a chance to a normal life.

In a world where appearances can be of the utmost importance, being able to better yourself is a great chance. It can help a person accept themselves better or give a new meaning to someone's life. It is important though to remember that we live in a world literally inhabited by billions of people who all look different. Using plastic surgery to fit standards could cause the loss of our individuality, you know, that thing that makes us human.

Question

Tell me in 1 minute the advantages and disadvantages of plastic surgery mentioned by the speaker.

Answers

Advantages / Disadvantages

This billion dollar industry seems to be breaking new popularity records every year. While some people denounce the abuses committed in the name of beauty, others have much more liberal views. In other words, it has been at the heart of an ongoing debate for decades.

But is plastic surgery only a tool used to boost one's ego ?

The normalisation of plastic surgery is having a major impact on younger generations. Young girls, and contrary to belief boys as well, are faced with images of people having undergone plastic surgery on a daily basis. These representations often do not match the reality of what the billions of humans look like, causing a rise in teenage mental disorders. As mentioned previously, plastic surgery is a billion dollar industry. The consequence is that of unlicensed doctors tricking patients into unnecessary or dangerous surgeries for personal gain, with devastating consequences. Lastly, one can become addicted to plastic surgery, abusing it to the point of endangering their financial stability and health.

Nonetheless, surgery is constantly evolving and there are newer and safer procedures implemented every year. Plastic surgery is a booming specialty of surgery. Therefore it has become and keeps on becoming better and safer. There are also those who live with great complexes and cannot find release in more traditional alternatives. The mental benefits can be tremendous for them, often greater than the physical results. In extreme cases, plastic surgery is actually vital to give some people a chance to a normal life.

In a world where appearances can be of the utmost importance, being able to better yourself is a great chance. It can help a person accept themselves better or give a new meaning to someone's life. It is important though to remember that we live in a world literally inhabited by billions of people who all look different. Using plastic surgery to fit standards could cause the loss of our individuality, you know, that thing that makes us human.